Reactions To Culver

Reactions, the responses to the aesthetic and physical aspects of environment, are the essence of living — instructors, other cadets, the campus, the uniform, dining hall food, sunrise . . . one hour after reveille. Remaining in bed 'til the three minute bell, or until the authorities walk through barracks has been unofficial Culver tradition for as long as anyone can remember, or cares to remember at that hour. Procrastination starts in the morning, but unlike bed, you sometimes never leave it during the day.

School work seems to receive the brunt of procrastination, but sooner or later homework demands a response, when long-range assignments become all-night realities.

There is, by God's grace, an immeasurable difference between late and too late.

Madame Swetchine

Opportunities for learning are both diverse and challenging. The fatal consequence of pigeonholing assignments is just one way cadets learn.

Sitting in a classroom may be an easier means of acquiring knowledge, but an instructor can only present a concept to his pupils—the student must think it out for himself to gain more than memorized facts. Occasionally, the subject hardly seems worth attention. Determining the fruit fly's reproduction rate may not seem significant, but it is a step toward learning how to learn.

Practical experiences abound at Culver; almost everyone learns how to make his bed. The correct technique of folding laundry, the nomenclature of the M-1 rifle, and the 11 General Orders soon become common knowledge.

A mind uncluttered by useful knowledge is capable of contentment and even happiness.

A. A. Milne

One of education's basic objectives is to teach students to learn by their own reasoning. If puzzling unsuccessfully over a problem won't strengthen your reasoning power, at least it will improve your perseverance.

At Culver, reasoning is a keenly developed art form. The textbook that supplies answers to some questions tempts the crafty cadet to write down the answer, then to spend hours figuring out calculations to justify it.

Rationalization is reasoning under pressure. Culver affords opportunities for this too. . . .

The authority of reason is far more emperious than that of a master; he who disobeys the one is unhappy, he who disobeys the other is a fool.

Pascal

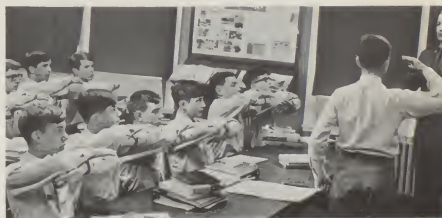

To 877 cadets, the military sometimes serves as a restriction to, rather than an added dimension of education. Nevertheless, Culver, as a society governed by cadet officers, schedules A through G and an elaborate network of bells (not always coordinated with the schedules), is still an environment which encourages self-discipline and a gradual assumption of leadership.

No system is without a party of opposition. The Academy also has an ardent dissenter, the B.A. (bad attitude). Characteristically late B.R.C., P.I., and 2nd C.Q., he ignores Q.P.s, flaunts S.O.P.C./C. and will eternally march E.D. He also shows an inherent distaste for the system's abbreviations.

M.S.T. instruction (Military Science & Tactics) is one abbreviation to which everyone submits. . . .

The most intelligent men, like the strongest, find their happiness where others would find only disaster: in the labyrinth, in being hard with themselves and with others, in effort; their delight is in self-mastery.

F. W. Nietzsche

Just about everyone this year was given a taste of leadership on a rotating rank system. Despite the confusion caused within each organization during the first semester, the extra burdens on the captains, and the inconsistent interpretations of policy reaching most of the Corps, the innovation was a success. At least a greater number of people realized the difficulty of exercising authority.

Some individuals assumed an overwhelming task when they tackled the challenge of upholding correct military bearing on campus. Telling cadets, "Get your hands out of your pockets," became less a matter of leadership than a futile persistence of a few against many.

The right of commanding is no longer an advantage transmitted by nature; like an inheritance, it is the fruit of labors, the price of courage.
Voltaire

To learn group living as a basis for group life—this has been the basic tenet for mankind since organized society began.

MICHIGANENSIA 1957

What could be more barren, more void of excitement than a barrack? To the rhythm of Wolly Bully, Simon & Garfunkel, The Supremes, and erratic radiator pipes, inhabitants discover the advantages of an organized society.

Activities converge primarily within the halls, long passageways with appendages for rooms. It is through these halls that people leave for ranks, classes or sports. Into them they sweep dust, throw trash, and walk barefooted to and from the shower. For a majority of the year, barracks are home.

Spirit. It's usually lowest in the morning. It touches bottom somewhere between 6:40 and 6:43.

During the fall, the Culver Song and a "Big 15" are measures of spirit. What could be more exciting than a football game, especially when it's a required formation? But, by the end of the first quarter, most of the Corps' enthusiasm is gone. Most of the Corps is gone, too. Only the Band remains without absentees to make up in quality what is sometimes lacking in quantity.

Not all activities lack interest at Culver Military Academy! Every Thursday evening three quarters of the first class unite in front of the television set in Beason, where for one hour Star Trek overrules any other preoccupation.

Culver has other big events that evoke spirit throughout the year. Homecoming. Mother's Day. Haircut Day. Friday.

Nothing is achieved without enthusiasm—the way of life is wonderful; it is by abandonment.

Ralph Waldo Emerson

Independent religious congregations have been burgeoning this year—mostly cults with a select membership of one. A poll taken at the year's outset noted not only a number of agnostics, but the presence of such fractional groups as Existentialists, Epicurians, and several Protestants. Normally lenient towards these sects, the Academy's religious liberality was protested when a prominent teak Buddha (Clyde) was deposed as a trinket.

The Chapel is the center of Culver's non-sectarian worship during weekly matins and Sunday chapel services. Religion is not as conspicuous the remainder of the week when barracks echo "Oh God!" more often than the sanctuary. While unbowed heads might indicate those who refuse to recognize God at all, others find His omnipotence stretches far enough to provide Cordon trips to Beason Park to escape Saturday Inspections.

I will not worship that which ye worship; nor will ye worship that which I worship . . .
Ye have your religion, and I have my religion.
The Koran

Culver students fall into one of two dissimilar categories — cadets or coeds.

What are girls doing enrolled at a military academy? Until recently, the answer might well have been, "They're not girls, they're coeds" — a generic term labeling the daughters of the faculty.

After 10 years of sitting in the remote corners of classrooms, the girls have finally come into their own. Besides attending classes, they have participated in football games (selling refreshments), publications, theater, and occasionally the dances.

Yet, most of the Corps lives for the guest weekends and a date with a girl from home or, at least, the risky venture of a blind date. No matter how hard coeds tried, most cadets maintained a certain reserve absent from other encounters.

With most people there will be no harm in occasionally mixing a grain of disdain with your treatment of them; that will make them value your friendship all the more.

Arthur Schopenhauer

Where does one look for individualism in a military society? A fad disguises outward appearances and makes individuality difficult to discern. To find it among uniformed cadets is almost impossible.

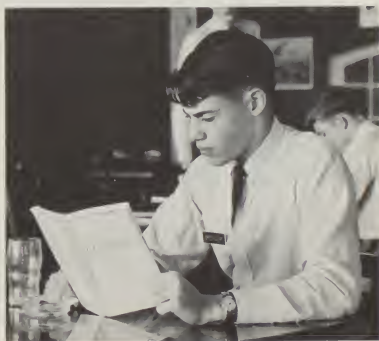

If a man won't keep pace with his companions, it isn't always because he hears a different drummer — sometimes he's just out of step. B.A.s buck the system in their pursuit of non-conformity. They flock to indifference or total inaction in their avoidance of conformity.

Constructive individuality takes more enthusiasm than most non-conformists possess.

You must pay for conformity. All goes well as long as you run with conformists. But you, who are honest men in other particulars, know that there is alive somewhere a man whose honesty reaches to this point also, that he shall not kneel to false gods, and, on the day when you meet him, you sink into the class of counterfeits.

Ralph Waldo Emerson

The objects that decorate a room are one means of self-expression.

A plebe's cubicle could hardly be called "decorated", the ordinary new cadet subsists with a wardrobe and a desk, a bed, a chair, and little else. Gradually, each room acquires posters, a record player, necessary and frivolous trinkets, until the walls and furniture begin to reflect the personality of the occupant. The first classman's room is an entity that grows out of several years of accumulation and rearrangement.

Something as diverse as the clutter found in cadet living quarters is difficult to define as correct or inappropriate. But categorized it was when the Commandant and a committee of cadets attempted to establish a happy medium between comfortable living, and military orderliness. Mugs, trophies, and figurines received exact limitations on their size and number per cadet. Despite these restrictions, untold numbers of "personal articles" had to be stowed in the trunk room for Government Inspection.

The first spiritual want of a barbarous man is decoration, as indeed we still see among the barbarous classes in civilized countries.

Thomas Carlyle

Nothing gives a parent greater pride, delights a girl friend more, or impresses a cadet less than his uniform. Its initial glamor fades after a month of the same "distinctive" shirts, trousers, and ties have transformed each person into an indistinct element.

Cadets are not uniform because of the similarity of their clothes; the uniform is instead moulded to the individual. Distinction for many is worn on the Dress A. Just about everyone has some kind of marksmanship medal, club patch, or activity pin that makes him different. The accoutrements of rank become so complex that it occasionally takes a second person to help an officer get dressed.

Perhaps the most subtle evidence of individuality is the fatigue cap. Each has personality, a peculiar characteristic that makes it recognizable on any hatrack.

I wear my hat as I please.
Walt Whitman

Culver stimulates countless reactions; the most significant are the responses to other people. Half of all roommates have a great deal to do with the way in which the other half lives. A roommate's peculiar personality, the care packages he does or does not receive from home, or the degree of interest he shows in cleaning the room can make life tolerable and maybe even refreshing.

The interests of a student and how much he learns are often decided by the teacher's enthusiasm, not the nature of the subject.

People are a part of every Culver reaction. They inspire lasting memories, and sometimes, mold future lives. It is this human quality which produces a meaningful response to Culver experiences.

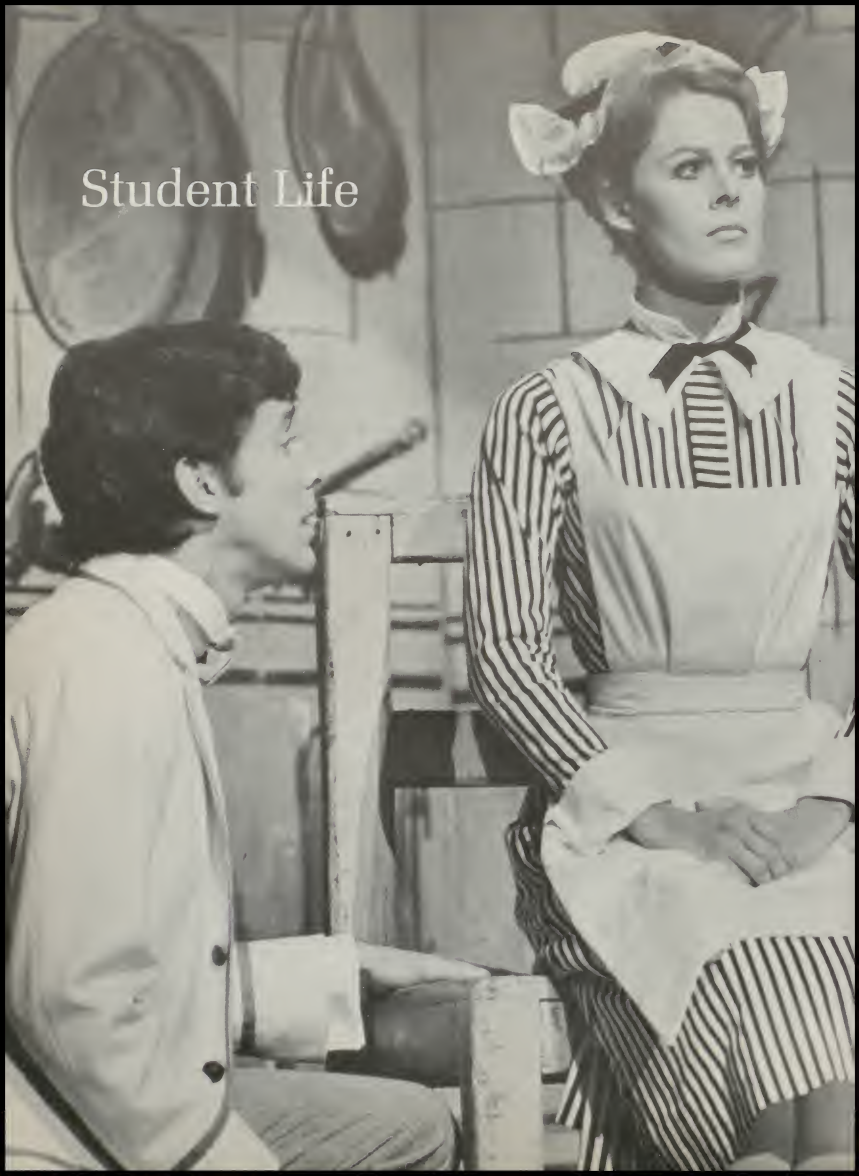

There is a magic in the memory of a schoolboy friendship; it softens the heart, and even affects the nervous system of those who have no heart.

Benjamin Disraeli

Varied Series Draws Mixed Corps Reaction

Artie begs forgiveness from the maid, Ann, in "Half A Sixpence." The musical, based on H. G. Wells' "Kipps," received a standing ovation from the Corps at a Concert-Theatre Series presentation. The series is considered as an extension of the curriculum since it is to expand cultural exposure.

The Strolling Players featuring Viveca Lindfors presented "Three Boards and a Passion," a dramatic commentary on all aspects of the theater ranging from the Greek classics to the Theater of the Absurd.

"The Decline and Fall of the Entire World as Seen Through the Eyes of Cole Porter" gave the Corps a different view of Porter's music than is commonly gained through records or radio by using pop art slides and unusual sound effects to ornament the musical biography.

Actor Bramwell Fletcher portrayed George Bernard Shaw as a human being rather than a stereotyped image. Fletcher's humorous portrayal captured the genial side of Shaw's life.

Aristophanes' fifth century B.C. production entitled "The Birds," presented by the National Players Jan. 11, contained an updated dialogue, but left the plot virtually unchanged. Eulpides and Pithetaerus, who abandoned the human race to establish Utopia in Birdland, join Epops, king of the birds, in a plot to serve as intermediaries between earthlings and the gods.

Frans Reynders, famed mime, devoted a portion of his show to "The Girl," a skit involving Rene Schultz, sister of Tim Schultz of Company D. Mr. Reynders portrayed a self-centered man who was deeply involved in playing a guitar and catching flies. Miss Schultz was amused with his concentration and attempted to divert his attention by taking the place of the guitar until he realized that there was more to life than music.

The Metropolitan Opera Studio Ensemble gave the Corps a varied view of Shakespeare through opera and song. The program varied from Shakespearian opera to Cole Porter's "Kiss Me Kate."

Dr. John Gibson, acting director of the Lincoln Filene Center for Citizenship and Public Affairs at Tufts University, spoke in October about his work with Culver's History I course. Dr. Gibson and C.M.A. history instructor L. Kingsley Moore produced both the textbook and visual aids for the new course.

Dr. Henry T. Heald, past president of N.Y.U., I.I.T., and the Ford Foundation, addressed the Corps during Homecoming Weekend on the independent school's role in today's society. In recognition of his work in education Dr. Heald received the Culver Distinguished Service Award, an engraved silver sabre, while reviewing a parade in his honor.

Dr. Carlos H. Baker, former chairman of the Princeton English department and noted authority on American and English literature, delved into the origin and style of Ernest Hemingway's short stories with the first and second classes.

Students Are Satisfied Somewhere Between Trivia and Tribulation

Theater '67, under the direction of Leo K. Cohen, presented three plays during the year. The first production, Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth," told the story of the universal family. In these scenes Sabina (Lela Donnelly), the eternal "other woman," tries to work her charms on Mr. Antrobus (Jim Grimes); but his wife (Susan Helber) pulls the family together again as she has done for 5,000 years.

In the second Theater '67 performance of the year, Oliver (Al Tumpson) assures Bet (Eley Graham) that he would do anything for her.

Fagan, portrayed by British faculty member John W. Chadwick, advises his "boys" on the finer points of picking Londoner's pockets during the Feb. 4 performance of "Oliver!"

Hank Liese, Vedette editor-in-chief, discusses editorial ideas, promotions, and content plans with his editors and faculty advisor David H. Gaskill at one of the paper's weekly SRC seminars.

Photographers Mitch Padnos, Carl Wyatt, Ralph Teetor, and Bill Brown analyze contact sheets in one of the weekly meetings planned to stimulate creative and comprehensive pictorial coverage of Culver.

Tenth Muse editors endeavored to establish the alumni literary magazine as an annual publication by sending copies of the 1966 Tenth Muse to all parents as a promotion. TENTH MUSE EDITORS: (l. to r.), Tom Rosell, Frank Johnson, Paul DeRosa, Tim York. NOT SHOWN, John Domont, Sam Walters, Jim Wallace.

Quill editors Susan Helber, Frank Johnson, Advisor John M. Hartley, Don Flora, Bob Crosby, and Randy Ollett show a variety of emotions as they analyze literary work submitted to them by cadets.

Roll Call editors Bill Brown, Bill Smitherman, Roger Ferry, Dave Denton, Mike Frank, Randy Ollett, Mike Hearn, Ruth Benner, and Lela Donnelly probe problems posed in the production of Culver's yearbook. The editorial board supervised the switch to offset printing and added four color pictures to this year's offering.

Daniel Webster brought oratorical experience from Forensics competition to the lectern as a member of the Guild of Lectors. The Lectors, under the supervision of English instructor John M. Hartley, provided readers for matins and chapel services as well as special services throughout the year.

The three old and nine new members of the Blue Notes collaborated with the St. Mary's High School Glee Club to produce a South Bend television show and a Christmas program at St. Mary's High School. In February the group performed at the district music contest and throughout the year sang at various events both on and off campus.

Cordon Council officers conferred weekly with Chaplains Allen F. Bray III and Jerome W. Berryman concerning Cordon trips to Beason Park and the annual fund raising drive for the Campus Chest. This year they collected over $2,300 for charities including the Save the Children Federation, World University Service, and Council for Religion in Independent Schools.

Aside from singing canticles and anthems at Sunday chapel services, the choir, under new director Robert L. Kamrow, practiced for concerts in Chicago, Cincinnati, Flint and Grand Rapids.

Steve Markelz directed the Dance Band in the Infantry, Mounted Services, and Homecoming balls. They are rehearsing for the Talent Show in which they represented the Band.

Troop B's Louis Magill and Tyler Robbins, members of a singing group, the Yankee Stamps, tied for first place with Company C's Mike Bushnell in this year's Talent Show. Other entries included Battery B's jazz combo, Troop A's slapstick comedy, a dramatization from a member of Company B, and a Coed singing group.

Bob Warner and Mike Frank present their side of the case in a practice debate, as Dave Newill and Mark Oppenheimer plan their rebuttal. William J. MacQuillan intended to have his Forensics team achieve self-confidence before entering competition throughout the state.

Led by Marshall Mann and Bill Ferrell the Soul Brothers put out a brand of music which commanded the attention of everyone within earshot. Members Bruce Baker, Joe Harris, Paul De Rosa, Bill Halstead, Kevin Combee, and Tom Skinner added to the group's popularity and volume.

The Harvest Moon Concert, performed on the colonnade of Eppley Auditorium in October, was one of Col. Edward T. Payson's climazing creations in the last of his 41 years of teaching at Culver.

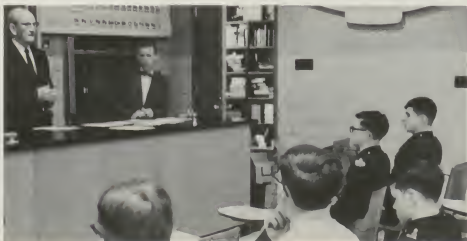

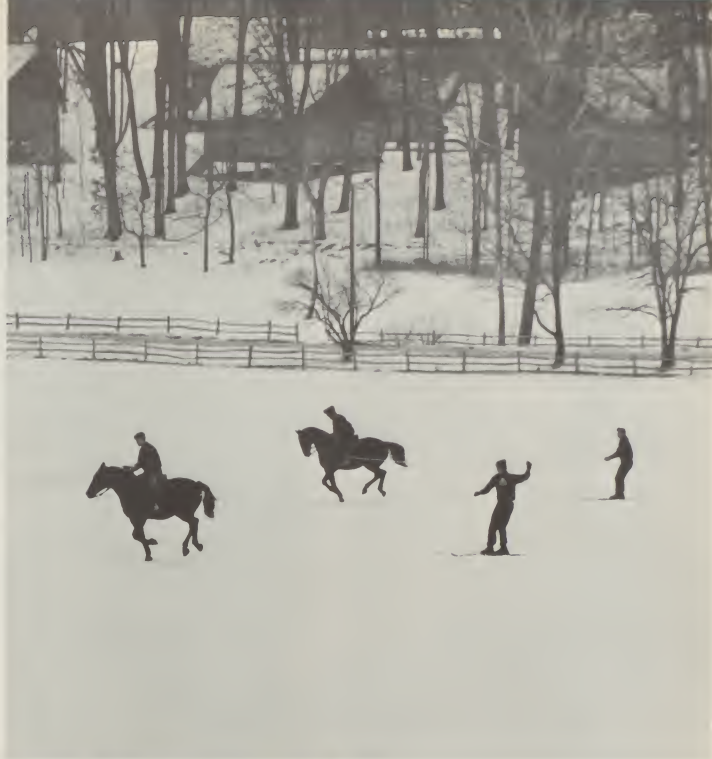

Spanish Club sponsor Dr. Armando F. Perez illustrates various aspects of Spanish culture to Mike Frank, club president, and Bob Morris. During the Monday afternoon meetings, Central and South American members lectured in Spanish about their home countries.

Derik Reese leads the International Club members in a discussion of Venezuela. The club provides an opportunity for foreign students to express opinions and problems of their native lands. Founded last year by Chaplain Jerome W. Berryman, the club elected Armando Raynal, a native of Mexico, as its president.

Some of the 32 members of Explorer Post 261 and the 40 members of Scout Troop 262 listen to Dean John W. Henderson at one of their weekly meetings. Under the direction of Scoutmaster Darrell H. Beach, Culver's Scouts broadened their activities to include weekly camp-outs and several canoe trips.

Some Ski Club members tried their skill at ski-joring during recreation period with some of Col. William R. Robb's Rough Riders.

The Firearms Club collected and fired many sizes, types, and vintages of weapons. Its weekly meetings were highlighted by the seemingly unlimited supply of personal experiences retold by Club advisor, Captain Melville K. Short.

The Scuba Club met Monday afternoons with its advisor, Lt. Col. Kermit C. Zeig, to brush up on diving techniques. During this session, Atwood Rice explains the procedure of adjusting an air regulator to Bob Thompson, Dan Hoover, and Jack Shoaff.

John Bibb, stamp club president, examines part of the American and foreign collections traded and sold at club gatherings. The group was without a sponsor during the first semester while Norman G. Wagner was on sabbatical in England.

Rich Cregar concentrates on the details of a scale model battleship. The Models and Crafts workshop, advised by Wallace H. Helber, provided facilities which enabled students to build plastic and wood models, gas-motored airplanes, and hi-fi amplifiers.

Col. Edward T. Payson, explaining a portion of the Model Railroad Club's operation to a group of fifth classmen, illustrates some practical applications of science.

In one of the projects begun by Coin Club advisor Lt. Col. Alan G. Cornett, Allen Bunge, Steve Goranson, and President Bill Sullivan catalogued the Academy's coin collection for exhibition.

Puzzling over a complex problem, Bill Reader, Roger Ferry, Jim Reitman, and Brian Cox discuss tactics during one of their weekly practice sessions for the annual National Math Contest.

Philosophy Club members listen to a discussion led by Norman G. Wagner and L. Kingsley Moore concerning ethics in the modern world.

As Culver ties the score, Scott Gordon, the only varsity letterman in cheerleading, leads a round of applause and encourages Culver support.

Coed Sandy Baker helps Varsity Club member Mike Potts sell refreshments at a home football game. The Varsity Club worked to promote sportsmanship and sports-mindedness within the Corps.

Cadet Club members, including Chuck Schumacher, Chris Knoz, and Lance Antrim, met in their room in Beason Hall to recommend solutions for problems in the Corps. Late in January, a conference with General Spivey reassured the members that not a new set of problems but the Captains' newness to senior responsibilities had caused their concern.

The Hop Club, consisting of all permanent commissioned officers, sponsored the Mounted Service and Infantry Dances. The club's officers, Campbell McGinnis, Chris Knoz, Duffy Dukette, Mike Perron, and Paul De Rosa, arranged blind dates, planned decorations, and organized the student life for both weekends.

Kevin Combee does his best as a Social Committee member to impress an Academy visitor.

Student Involvement Focus of School Life

Gignilliat Quadrangle forms the center of Culver's student life, the academic classes. Usually, new arrivals see only the buildings and the academic aspect of Culver. Only in the course of a Culver career do they gain a true insight into student life at a boarding school.

During the few free moments between the hectic activities of Father's Weekend in September, cadets found time for the real purpose of the weekend, to be with their fathers.

Corps spirit got out of hand in midwinter when enthusiasm over Alonzo Williams erupted with the painting of the Dining Hall canopy as "Lonzo's Steak and Shake." Here the popular dining hall employee discusses life with Al Ranney and Gary Hill.

Despite the temptations of picture books, joke collections, and the all-too-soothing chairs, Louie Schlotterer studies in the lounge of the library.

Miles Kehoe checks the arithmetic of Mary Baker, a popular "Shack" personality, as she tabulates his bill, and Colin Brown contemplates the cost of his lunch.

Walking back to campus on a crisp fall afternoon following a Culver football game provides a moment to relax before returning to the urgency of schedules.

"What, really sick this time?" Nurse Reba Wagoner wonders at the various student infirmities ranging from GIU (gastro intestinal upset) to Goldbricking.

The trek to the town of Culver provided an exposure to the "outside world." The movies at the El Rancho Theater and grocery bills at Pete's Lakeside Grocery became only a form of procrastination to some cadets, but to others they were a means of existence.

Soul Brothers Marshall Mann and Bill Ferrell take a break from their performance as they dance to the music of the Dance Band at the Infantry Ball.

Culver students annually honor all Academy graduates who have fought and died in defense of their country during Veterans' Day observances on the steps of the Culver Legion Memorial Building.

Sandy Baker and Leigh Linnemeier, along with the rest of the faculty daughters, spent many of their winter P.D. sessions trampolining, often within the envious gaze of Honor Guard and E.D. squad members. Mr. Marshall's "men," as he fondly referred to them, also participated in such activities as softball, rifle, and touch football.

Band and Company B Quiz Bowl teams match instant recall on a question from moderator David H. Gaskill. Band lost to Battery A in the semi-finals, but Company A walked away with the lantern trophy after a hotly-contested final match.

The Barber Shop, long a source of conflict between the Corps and Academy as to the definition of the well-groomed cadet, saw explosions of everything from pyrotechnics to tempers.

A college representative discusses relative merits of his institution with Victor Alexander. The Academy sponsors an extensive program to afford students the opportunity to familiarize themselves with college offerings.

"I never have enough time!"

Recognizing the various desires of cadets, the Academy is willing to promote, help organize, and sponsor any group of cadets demonstrating sufficient interest in an activity. Such was the case with Steve Gray and fellow archers who began an archery club with S/Sgt. Richard Wright as advisor.

Coming from 41 states and 19 foreign countries, Culver students shape friendships which continue to span great distances and many years.

Graduation from a military academy is more than just walking through an Iron Gate. For first classmen it is a colorful leave-taking from a way of life; for underclassmen, it means one year closer to a goal.

Varsity Football kicked off the 1967 athletic seasons with a romping 20-7 victory over Bremen. The win captured the Corps' spirit for another year of Culver athletics.

Two opposing defenders close in on halfback Spence Dickinson (4) as Chip Linnemeier only hopes Dickinson can break free.

Culver's line, which averaged 181 pounds, protects quarterback Dave Rafes as he receives a hike from Van Matthews. Guard Dave Dale, to Rafes' right, was awarded Culver's Edward A. Logue Medal for excellence in football. Matthews and fullback Charlie Borton, who averaged 5.3 yards per carry, received honorable mentions on the South Bend All-Area football team.

Kicking specialist Phil Williams, whose punts averaged 34.2 yards for the season, lofts the ball against Bremen.

Coach Russell D. Oliver, who has compiled a 130-67-11 record in his 27 years of coaching Culver football, shouts instructions and urges his players from the sidelines.

Frosh-Soph Captain Roger Bird hauls in a Rich Rafe's touchdown pass despite the desperate lunge of a Knox defender. The Frosh-Soph team, coached by Colin W. Stetson, ended the season with a 4-1 record spoiled only by a 26-24 loss to LaLumiere.

Roberto Marcel fires from midfield as John Mehrten, Bob Fogel, and Captain Tim Schultz watch eagerly in a game against Argos. Culver lost 3-2, but later avenged Argos 2-1.

In a game hampered by high winds and many injuries, half-back Tom Mathews stays ahead of two pursuing Argos players. The late season win against Argos marked the beginning of a four-game winning streak which terminated in a final loss to Divine Heart Seminary.

Keith Oldham, Fred Mann, Steve Kling, and Jim Etchen, the members of Culver's C-4 team, endeavor to remain undefeated. They constitute half of Culver's eight-man war canoe team that won the national C-8 event in New Rochelle, N.Y., July 23-24.

Steve Kling and Keith Oldham, among the many Culver canoists to place in the summer nationals in New York, returned to the Academy in the fall to work through more hours of vigorous practice.

Chris Greenleaf paddles through a fall kayak practice. Although kayaks could not be entered in organized competition, they became popular because of their novelty and speed.

Gabor Joo battles toward another win for the Canadian national team in the North American Canoeing Championships on Lake Mazinkuckee Sept. 17-18.

An American C-2 team vainly attempts to stem the eventual Canadian sweep of the men's events in the North American Canoeing Championships. Keen competition attracted not only national team members but also international racing officials and enthusiasts.

Marcia Smoke helped the American team to the final 6-6 tie with two decisive kayak victories. American Coach Kalman Blaho, the man responsible for bringing the championships to Lake Mazinkuckee was one of the few racing dignitaries missing. He suffered a heart attack three days before the competition and died 10 days later.

Vying for position, Joe Cummings and Doug Scholz increase the pace in the opening stages of the race against Warsaw which Culver went on to win. The lengthened course raised times but allowed a more favorable comparison to the flat courses of opposing teams.

Profiting from many practices on the cross country course, Chuck McNaghy and Casper Martin, two of the six lettermen in the second class, leave their opponents in the woods.

Dempsey Watson strains for greater heights to help the Culver Eagles gain their 8-2-1 record for the indoor season.

The purpose of the long hours of lonely, sometimes frustrating, practice becomes apparent only when the race is run. Charlie McNagny, Culver's leading half miler, stretches out during the first half of the grueling 880 yard run.

Having cleared another of the three-foot obstacles facing a high hurdler, two year letterman Perry Smith prepares his attack of the next hurdle. The Culver hurdlers, led by Smith, were instrumental in the team's winning season.

Because Culver has the only three-weapon high school fencing team in the Midwest, it meets collegiate opponents which include the number-one ranked team in the nation, Notre Dame University. Drills to prepare the much improved varsity team for the competition included a perpetuation of lunges, advances, and retreats.

Mike Krempp zeroes in on his target in standing, one of the four positions used by the varsity rifle team in its matches. Long hours of practice enabled the riflemen to finish their season ranked first in the state, second in the Fifth Army, third in the Midwest, and among the top ten in the nation.

Although not a well-known sport, rough riding provided a challenge for even the most experienced riders. The mounted acrobats worked through the winter to perfect different mounts, pyramids, and complicated trick riding.

Bob Wahl, co-captain of the jumping team, schools his horse for the approaching spring horseshow. Earlier in the season six troopers took 19 places at Niles, Mich., and later exhibited for a jumping clinic there.

Cadet Kim Jansen, first classman of Troop A, battles for the ball against an opposing polo player in one of the team's 19 matches. The team earned a 17-2 record for Culver.

Highlighting Culver's defensive plays were steals like this one by Ron Rubin. Strong defense was attributed to the fact that the Eagles won 11 of their last 12 games.

Tim Schultz captures the crowd's attention as he fires over the heads of defenders. Schultz was named Most Valuable Player after Culver's 13-7 season. Coach Thomas E. Baker felt that, in addition to his high shooting average, Schultz was a definite aid in the overall team defense.

Basketball coach Thomas E. Baker plans strategy with Chris Knox, Ron Rubin, Mark Bodem, and Rich White and makes substitutions during a time out in one of the Eagles' 20 games.

Tim Schultz and a St. John's Lancer vie for the ball as Gordie Delk and Chip Brewer await the outcome of the play.

Tom McMillan lets go with a jumpshot against St. John's as teammates Tim Shultz and Gordie Delk get set for the rebound.

Coach Colin Stetson trained his wrestlers to be quick thinking. In this meet, Roger Bird plans his strategy against a wrestler from South Bend Clay.

Platt Hill calculates a move to clinch a pin against an opponent in the 123-pound weight class. The team's high point trophy went to Hill who will be next year's co-captain with Lou Schlotterer.

The referee acknowledges another fall in favor of the Eagles. Opposing coaches selected Guy Berry to receive the Coaches' Trophy as an outstanding competitor, and team captain Scott Wood entered the elite Quarter Century Club for winning at least 25 matches in his Culver career.

Bill Brown, captain of the swimming team, crouches for a dive as he awaits the starter's gun for the 40-yard freestyle.

Under the surveillance of a cheering crowd, George Roulhac stretches to extend his team's lead in the 400-yard freestyle relay.

The Culver Eagles roar as their swimmers move ahead in upsetting Kokomo's 62-meet winning streak with a 50-45 victory.

Cadets scanning over the lake during spring and fall rec periods saw the rhythmic, almost mechanical, motion of the varsity crew. The "machine", however, was a group of nine individuals, all pulling for a common goal.

First boat coxswain Chuck Hauser was the smallest member of the crew, but he undoubtedly had the largest voice.

Varsity crew members worked individually for a total effect. Sometimes utilizing late evening S.R.C. practices, the team readied itself for the first of four regattas April 29.

Versatile pitcher Dave Dale turned base-runner when he beat out this ground ball during the South Bend Adams game. A combination of Dale's hitting and pitching led the Eagles to a 12-1 victory.

Weather for David L. Nelson's third season as baseball coach was just as cold as usual; nevertheless, his advice sparked an improved team to win its first two games by an average margin of nine runs.

Dave Dale winds up for a pitch in varsity baseball's season opener against La-Ville. In this 8-0 shutout Dale struck out 19 of 21 batters and aided the Culver cause with a three-run homer.

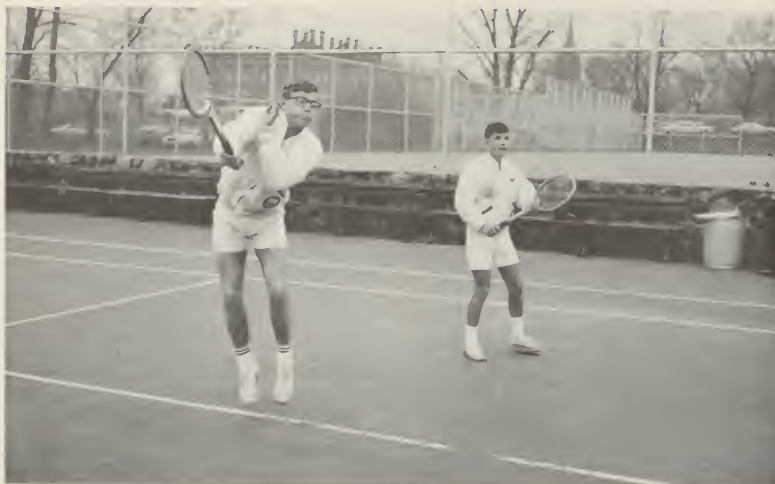

In its first two games the varsity baseball team had 11 hits. In these instances, Roll Call photographers only seemed able to catch the strikes.

Stop action wasn't fast enough to catch one of Alex Williams' hits against South Bend Adams. His hit dashed the hopes of the catcher for another strikeout.

Attempting a return from the half volley position, Dave Mehrtens leaves his feet as Santiago Montufar shouts his approval. Both players are returning lettermen and play in the third and fourth positions on the team.

Lee Beckman, Culver's number one tennis player, rapidly returns a volley with a running backhand stroke.

Four year letterman Rick Hubble scrapes the court to complete a low return during the first match of the season. Culver beat Logansport 5-4.

Sophomore letterman Al Ranney anticipates the slope of the green as he putts in front of Culver's new club house. Completed this spring, the facility features showers, a lounge, pro shop and storage space for golf clubs and carts.

Team captain and two-year letterman Bob Crosby and Coach Thomas E. Baker comment on Chip Brewer's swing as Dave Seckler and Add Thompson pick up pointers.

Coxswain Doug Robertson and oarsmen Dunc Munn, Steve Saunders, Chuck Caponigro, and Bill Smitherman struggle toward another victory for Battery C. In the final crew standings, Company A had 48 points to win the regimental championship followed by Battery C with 46 points and Company D and Band, both with 44 points.

Chuck Gainer and Ron Huggins concentrate on retaining their lead in a doubles competition. Their 10-1 record contributed to Company D's 34 total points and regimental tennis championship.

Company E ran away from Battery B 37-0 to win the regimental honors in football. Even the officials are in pursuit of E Company's quarterback Len Green as he carries the ball in this game against Company D.

Doug Doerge, of Battery B, stretches for extra inches in the intramural swimming competition. Doerge set a new 40-yard butterfly record; Bill Orton, Company E, broke the 40-yard breaststroke record; and Win Roulhac, Battery C, tied the 40-yard freestyle mark. Company A swept the championship, taking twice as many points as the runner-up by winning both relays and placing more than one swimmer in most events.

Steve Brooks struggles to escape from Andy Harper for the intramural wrestling championship in the 120-pound class. The match terminated in a draw after two overtime rounds.

Anticipating a rebound, Don Flora of Company E, and Terry Rouch and Mike Peterson, Company A, vie for position. Company E's A and B teams finished the season with victories over Battery B to win the regimental championship in both leagues.

Mike Perron and Mike Kahn, Troop B, battle to spike the ball across the net to Troop A opponents. The regimental volleyball title went to Company D in both the A and B league competition.

Troop B marksmen mastered the company rifle competition by shooting 1,353 out of a possible 1,500 points. Matches took place in the standing, kneeling and sitting positions.

Although handball was not an official intramural event, Rich Richmond found that the sport provides many students with the opportunity for strenuous exercise.

Keeping track of the score during the foul-shooting competition, Tony Minelli observes shooter Tim York.

John Breckinridge, who won the heavyweight championship, lands a right hook over Bill Halstead's left jab. Intramural boxing championships were a favorite with spectators in the Corps again this year.

Larry DeVaney and John Cooper, both of Company C, work toward a position on the Company's intramural championship squash team.

John Ambrose, Company B, strains for added inches in the running broad jump. Company D retained the regimental title in track, and John Albright won the event with a leap of 18'6".

Intramural golfers sometimes strayed from the fairway. Chris Plumer wishes away a pine tree as he tries to clear the rough.

Kevin Kelso dashes into second as Mark Strangio jumps to catch the throw from a fielder in an A Company softball practice. Kelso slid into second safely.

Intramural soccer demands endurance and coordination, but do you have to bite your tongue to score? Mario Fernandez evades a fullback to drive the ball toward the opponent's goal.

General Spivey's Retirement Terminates His Progressive Era

DUTIES of a school superintendent today demand that the administrator concentrate his time on the institution rather than the individuals who pass through its gates. Because of these responsibilities, many cadets have rarely experienced the opportunity of speaking personally with Maj. Gen. Delmar T. Spivey, USAF (Ret.); they might shake his hand only in passing through the Iron Gate or at some other ceremonial function. If this is true, how can students evaluate the true stature of the man?

Only now, after the completion of General Spivey's last year as superintendent, is it possible to look back upon the dynamic changes which he has initiated. To keep pace with the present and prepare for the future, General Spivey realized the need for greatly increased funds to maintain and improve facilities and to retain a top notch faculty. "The only justification for a school like Culver is quality, and excellence is not gained by remaining still."

To attain this excellence, the General personally organized and directed a fund-raising program which resulted in over $9 million in gifts to Culver. Teacher salaries have been increased by 56%, financial aid to students tripled, eight endowed faculty chairs established, and the academic curriculum revised and strengthened. Administrative organizations have been revitalized to include a department of development and a controller's office.

General Spivey has been more to students, however, than simply an administrative chief. He has taken a keen interest in all cadet activities and has been both a leader and a teacher by living up to the high standards which he has demanded of those around him. He has continued to cheer at football games when most of the Corps has left the stands. He has extended his congratulations and encouragement at Awards Assemblies, participated in cadet functions, and discussed Culver with first classmen in his home.

The tangible progress Culver has made under General Spivey is easy to document, but alone it cannot be the true measure of the man or his work. New ideas, inspiration, and enthusiasm are General Spivey's foremost contributions to Culver.

Determination and vitality have been part of the spirit which has characterized General Spivey as superintendent, an enthusiasm he has transmitted to both the faculty and students. His participation in the field of education has brought recognition to Culver, and his far-reaching projects and policies have distinguished his era as one of unparalleled improvement.

The Board of Directors of the Culver Educational Foundation met Nov. 10, 1966, in one of its semi-annual meetings. They elected a new member, Richard W. Freeman, and named the retiring Reuben H. Fleet a director emeritus. Between sessions, board president Bertram B. Culver, Jr. dined informally with faculty members Rear Adm. John W. Bays, Col. Charles Mauld, Jr., and Dr. Donald J. Faulkner at the Culver Inn.

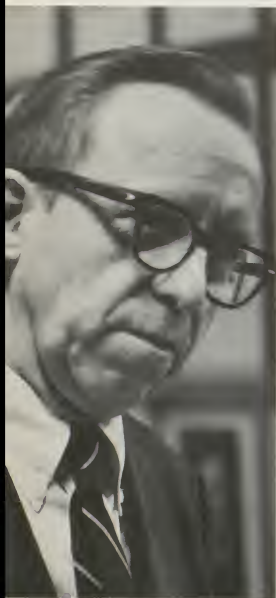

Mrs. Delmar T. Spivey tirelessly accompanied the General in many of the superintendent's duties outside the office. Greeting couples at the formal balls, her warm conversation helped ease the stiff atmosphere of the reception line.

Computer, and Added Courses Typify Academic Development

MODERNIZED curricula and methods of teaching—the switch from a seven to a four-point grading system, the administration of first semester examinations before Christmas, and the appointment of a curriculum committee to exhaustively reexamine every department and recommend changes—helped to keep Culver abreast of new trends in education.

Elimination of spoken English in third and fourth year language classes began with acquisition of a tape duplicator. Honors courses offered larger quantities of literature and lengthy translations to boost the quality of preparation for advanced college classes in foreign language.

Statistics and honors project students in the mathematics department learned to use the academy's IBM solid state computer obtained in the spring.

America's Democratic Heritage, previously a lecture series for seniors, became History 1, a standard course for fourth classmen. Introduction of half-credit Modern History gave more cadets an opportunity to study a wider range of history while at Culver.

Introduction of electives in the English department provided substitutes and supplements for the standard curriculum. Oral interpretation, a third class elective, centered about qualitative oral presentation of poetry, composition, and literature. Some second classmen who placed a strong emphasis on creative writing could enroll in the composition option, and others could elect the drama class which stressed study and dramatization of plays. A first class English instructor worked with his students in the study and interpretation of English writings in his English Literature elective. Some of the senior lectures were declared optional for the two literature classes, and several special lectures were delivered.

The science department continued an investigation into the possibility within two years of combining Physics and Chemistry into a four semester combination course.

ADJUSTING to a new counselor, Marine Captain Carl V. Steely, and exposing him to the guiles of Culver cadets provided a goal for Troop A. Despite a crackdown on more obvious breeches of regulations, the "Troop A Country Club" remained intact and continued its after taps TV parties.

Troopers also participated in a wide variety of extra-curricular activities. Troop Commander Paul De Rosa commanded the Lancers and was a cheerleader and a Tenth Muse editor. The first class elected Bruce Lee as its president.

The Troop's individual athletes captained several varsity teams. Kim Jansen paced polo, Scott Wood led wrestling, and Bruce Lee and Bob Wahl co-captained jumping. In addition, two Troop A intramural football players, Larry Lipnick and Bob Wahl, were chosen for The Vedette All-Star Team.

Aside from being ranking squadron captain, Troop commander Paul De Rosa acted as first vice president of the Hop Club and drummed for the Soul Brothers at the Infantry Dance, the Mounted Services Dance, and several Beason Hall dances.

In addition to inspecting troopers at ranks, Troop B Commander Mike Perron played on the Troop's football and volleyball teams; served on the Guild of Lectors, the first class board of governors, and the Honor Council; and was second vice president of the Hop Club.

RENOVATION characterized Troop B as fifth classmen joined the troop for the first time in Culver's history. All troopers groomed horses on a newly-initiated daily detail which inspired a cadet to publish and anonymously distribute a sarcastic article on grooming.

Counselor Eric U. Anderson's "Army" demonstrated its athletic proficiency by winning the regimental rifle championship. Three varsity football lettermen and varsity canoe captain Jim Etchen were troopers.

With the introduction of the new rank system, permanent officers carried more responsibilities than in previous years. In addition to his duties in supervising Troop B, Commander Mike Perron alternated as squadron commander, while Tom Hughes, operations officer, and Bill Galvin, adjutant, completed Troop B's majority on the squadron staff. Troop B claimed the highest ranked secondclassmen on campus. Regimental sergeant major and class president Bob Jordan, the Troop's first regimental officer in five years; Greg Marshall, ranking first sergeant; and Tim Warrick, third highest battalion staff sergeant, governed the Corps' secondclassmen militarily.

Battery A commander Campbell McGinnis, who won a varsity swimming letter as a third classman, concentrated on Battery activities in his upper class years. He also served as a member of the first class board of governors, social committee, and house committee.

CAPTAIN Campbell McGinnis and A Battery's new counselors began to fabricate a unified organization by strengthening the underclasses and motivating achievement. Counselor Richard A. Edwards used a blackboard to inform cadets daily of current activities, and assistant counselor John L. Babcock, a Battery A graduate of 1958, assisted Dave Menzie in conducting weekly third class meetings to stimulate future leadership. First Sergeant Bert Martin instituted second class meetings for the purpose of solidifying a 1968 policy for the organization.

Battery A won one of the first four best-unit competitions. A practice of rotating hall officers, who employed a merit system to evaluate the Battery's supply, was a major factor in the success.

In other activities, John Bibb presided over the Choir and sang with the Blue Notes for his fourth consecutive year; Hank Liese, Vedette editor-in-chief, represented the Battery in the Cum Laude Society. Secondclassman Doug Scholz captained the varsity cross country team, and Brad Strait become football co-captain-elect.

SPIRIT in Battery B developed quickly as Beaver became the Battery nickname at an opening intramural football victory. The triumph eventually led to a division championship soon supplemented by a second place finish in regimental tennis.

Counselor Channing E. Mitzell's battery claimed varsity rifle co-captains Miles Kehoe and Bruce Baker, crew captain Duffy Dukette, and baseball chieftain Dave Dale. Second place status in physical development test scores reflected the Battery's athletic prowess in the annual battle for the Athletic Plaque.

Battery B students played a salient role in campus activities. Battery Commander Duffy Dukette presided over the Hop Club; and Bill Ferrell, leader of the campus combo, "The Soul Brothers," was a member of the Social Committee. Roll Call editors Mike Frank and Sam Walters, and Vedette managing editor Rick Durkes were Beavers.

Duffy Dukette, Battery commander and co-captain of the varsity crew team, practices on the rowing machines. Battery B displayed a strong intramural athletic drive by winning regimentals in wrestling; becoming division champions in football and A and B league basketball; placing second in tennis; and producing a strong showing in rifle, swimming, and crew.

Battery Commander Dave Bennington and Regimental Commander Chuck Schumacher worked together in Battery C as military leaders. Both also earned the Morehead Scholarship to North Carolina University and captured varsity athletic teams.

BATTERY C defended the Academic Bowl for the seventh consecutive year. Dave Bennington, Randy Ollett, Todd Woods, and early inductee Chuck Schumacher constituted one third of the Cum Laude membership; Bennington and Schumacher were Culver's two Morehead Scholars. The Battery's first class posted well over a B average, which was followed closely by the underclass group of "Spartan Scholars" including Louie Schlotterer, who paced the Academy's second class at the end of the first semester.

Attempting to capture the Athletic Plaque for the fourth straight year, the Battery had lettermen in every available sport, a feat achieved by no other organization. Chuck Schumacher captained two varsity sports, fencing and crew, and Battery C outscored the Corps on the semi-annual physical development tests.

During parades Spartan leadership was on review. Regimental Personnel Officer Bob Mitchell and Aide-to-Chaplain Tom Mathews joined Senior Captain Chuck Schumacher on the regimental staff, and Duncan Munn marched as battalion operations officer. Half of the Four Gun Drill as well as four student publications editors came from Battery C. In his ninth year as counselor, Alexander D. Nagy continued to spark the Battery's competitive spirit with his constructive criticism and pointed subtleties.

Chris Knox, Company A commander and a second lieutenant in the Honor Guard, drills a portion of the Honor Guard during one of its winter practices. Knox played varsity basketball and company volleyball and softball, served as Hop Club secretary-treasurer and Honor Council member, and chaired the Cadet Club.

AIMING for military distinction, Company A began its quest to regain the Austin Trophy, annual award given to the best-drilled infantry unit. Company Commander Chris Knox and Counselor E. Kemp Moore began to fulfill this objective by developing unity sufficient to win the first six fall parades.

Team efforts in intramural crew and swimming earned two regimental championships for the Company. The fall crew passed Battery C by only two points, but the swimmers obtained twice as many points as the runner-up by winning both of the relays and by placing more than one swimmer in most events.

Two mid-year Cum Laude members, Colin Brown and Kevin Kelso, paced Company A academically. Brown was also Vedette sports editor, and John Domont did the photography editing for the Tenth Muse. Jim Vestermark served as vice-president of the first class and president of the Varsity Club.

INDIVIDUAL accomplishments formed a distinctive facet of B Company's year. New Counselor Francis W. Lovett and Captain Tom McMillan, an autumn transferee from Company A, shaped an organization permitting the greatest possible freedom for individual achievement.

Company B athletes stood out in both intramural and varsity competition. The Company had two intramural wrestling champions, 21 fall varsity letter winners, and varsity swimming captain Bill Brown.

The Company's tradition of providing the regimental mess officer continued as Dave Denton became the eleventh consecutive B Company cadet to serve in the position. Denton also gained a National Merit Finalist rating and held editorial positions on the Roll Call, Quill, and Tenth Muse staffs. Other publication editors from the Company were Bill Brown, Roll Call photography editor, and Roy Feldman, Vedette features and assistant news editor. Mark Oppenheimer presided over the Forensics Society; B Company individuals formed more than a quarter of the Honor Guard and Drill Team.

Tom McMillan, who took command of Company B early in November, was a key man on the golf team. As a starting end on the varsity football team, he was a quick handed receiver who saved several games. Tom also played varsity basketball and was the Honor Guard's color sergeant.

INGENUITY earned Saturday sleep-ins for Company C as it won the first four monthly best-unit competitions. The cadets employed a warning system in which the orderly alerted call boys and weary hall officers if an inspector entered South Barrack after the three-minute bell to apprehend any late sleepers. Despite rumors that Counselor Martin C. Uebel policed the cadets' rooms daily, the Company obtained a positive aspect.

Individuals in Company C earned recognition in their varied interests. Charlie Borton, the Company's only varsity football player, scored eight touchdowns to become the team's highest scorer. Intramural football player Bill Bartter and basketball player Mike Jackson were Vedette All-Stars.

In addition to his duties as Honor Guard Commander, ranking infantry battalion captain Lance Antrim earned a National Merit Letter of Commendation. Ward Miller became a National Merit Finalist, and Paul Hamer earned nomination to the Blue Key Society. Semester plebe Mike Bushnell tied for first place in the Talent Show with his rendition of a Brahms Rhapsody.

Lance Antrim trained with the gymnastics team after the varsity wrestling season. In addition to his academic and athletic interests Antrim commanded Company C, the Honor Guard and the Drill Team.

Commander Chip Brewer led the varsity basketball team to a 13-7 season and his company's volleyball team to a regimental championship. Brewer played varsity soccer and company softball, and he was a member of the Varsity Club and Honor Guard in his five years at the Academy.

COMPANY D regained Lt. Col. John L. Tanner as counselor. Two years earlier he had been the Company's assistant counselor and had spent 1966 with Battery A. The Company strove to maintain a tradition of athletic involvement by earning 27 varsity letters in fall and winter sports and claiming more varsity captains than any other organization. Commander Chip Brewer captained the basketball team, Bob Crosby led the golfers, Tim Schultz headed the soccer squad, and Scott Gordon paced the Cheerleaders. In the final intramural standings, the company tennis team edged Battery B by only one point, but the track team compiled twice the score of its nearest competitor by winning the eight-lap relay and taking firsts in four other events.

Academically, Bob Crosby and Jim Reitman represented Company D in the Cum Laude Society, John Reitman led the Academy third class, and 17 members of the Company earned Gold or Silver A's at semesters.

The company had two adjutants, Kirk Isgrig, the fifth consecutive regimental officer from Company D, and Bob Crosby, who marched on the battalion staff. Crosby and thirdclassman Chris Held had editorial positions on the Vedette.

CAPTAIN Don Flora and Counselor Frederick D. Lane stressed participation in athletics and extracurricular activities. E Company's football team charged through its four game schedule undefeated, granting only one touchdown. Co-captains Mitch Kohagen and Don Flora then steered the Company to the regimental championship in a 37-0 romp over Battery B. The team also claimed Vedette All-Stars Jerry Daugherty, Rod Dimond, Len Green, Chuck Petraitis, and Dempsey Watson.

Company E placed first in both basketball leagues, second in track, and fourth in swimming. Besides having lettermen in nearly every varsity sport, the Company claimed Al Kuchar, varsity football captain, and Pete Simpson, captain of varsity soccer.

Three student publications editors, Mike Hearn of Roll Call, Don Flora of Quill, and Frank Johnson of Tenth Muse; at least one officer from each class; and one third of the drill team came from Company E. The Company's individual achievements were supported by an organizational spirit exemplified through design of its third consecutive winning Homecoming Display.

Mike Hearn, aide to the superintendent and editor of Roll Call, and Don Flora, company commander, carefully inspect for G.I. Don Flora captained E Company's intramural football and A league basketball teams and was able to capture regimentals in both sports. E Company's B league basketball team also won regimentals.

BAND enrollment reached 100 members as Col. Edward T. Payson, director, concluded 48 years of affiliation with Culver, 41 of which were spent teaching. Besides providing the march music for parades, the Band presented a "Harvest Moon" open-air concert, Christmas dinner music, and a commencement concert.

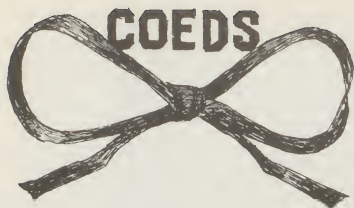

Counselor Ronald J. Gleason's Bandsmen helped boost Culver spirit by providing musical support at every home football and basketball game. Half of the choir, all but one member of the Dance Band, four of the 12 Blue Notes, and a large majority of students involved in theater came from the Band.

One third of the Band's first class received National Merit Letters of Commendation. Marshall Brown and Phil Johnson became members of Culver's Cum Laude Chapter at semesters, and Johnson was chosen as one of Culver's three National Merit Finalists.

The Band football team, paced by Captain Steve Hayward, came to within one point of the regimental football game, while the intramural soccer team won the fall championship. Also, four of the 11 starting varsity soccer players were Bandsmen.

Steve Hayward, co-captain of Band's basketball team, gives a pep talk near the end of the season. He captained Band's football, wrestling and soccer teams; chaired the Honor Council; and served as company commander.

THE 16 faculty daughters celebrated their tenth year of attendance at Culver with an anniversary cake and a sleepless night at Beason Park. Since 1957, the scope of the Coeds' involvement has expanded from only small roles in dramatics to include Forensics, Roll Call, Quill, assisting the Varsity Club at athletic events, and participating in varied theater functions.

On the Roll Call, Ruth Benner served as page design editor, and in the Theater '67 production, Lela Donnelly and Susan and Vicki Helber played lead roles. Each of the six seniors, who alternated one month terms as Coed president, acted in Oliver. In the Coed room, the seniors inspired both creation of the girls' first outdoor homecoming display and, despite frequent pleas for silence from nearby secretaries, practices for the Talent Show.

The faculty daughters also participated in a physical development program and earned academic distinction. In the fall and spring they played soccer and touch football and endured calisthenics with Mrs. Kahlman Blaho. On winter Monday and Thursday afternoons, while the Honor Guard and ED squads attempted to concentrate on their activities in the gym, the girls trampoline. At semesters, Marsha Estey was elected to the Cum Laude Society, and Ruth Benner gained Blue Key recognition. Half of the Coeds earned Gold or Silver A's for achievement during the first semester.

In the Christmas spirit, the Coeds wrapped gifts for Culver men in Vietnam and Korea.

National Merit Finalists Dave Denton, Phil Johnson, and Ward Miller competed for three of the 2,300 scholarships awarded this spring. The cash stipends range in value from $400 to $8,000 for a college career.

Dave Bennington and Chuck Schumacher were awarded Morehead Scholarships to the University of North Carolina after interviews at Chapel Hill in early March. These four-year grants encompass all student expenses at the university.

Here, in 1894, with this boulder as his workbench and nature's own out-of-doors for his shop, fashioned out of the mists of his boyhood dreams the framework of a school—a school where the youth of oncoming years should be forged into men fit for the citizenship of the morrow.

Within its 73-year history, the face and faces of Culver Military Academy have changed. Reactions to the Culver environment remain essentially the same. In the confusing transition from childhood towards manhood, each individual subconsciously experiences changes within himself through his response to the outward stimuli that have always meant Culver.

Acknowledgments

The Cover for the 1967 Roll Call was manufactured by the S. K. Smith Company, Chicago, Jack Bundy representative. It is tan cordoba in color with a dark seagram overtone and shoe grain texture. The book was bound by the Free Methodist Publishing House, Winona Lake, Ind.

Printing for the 63rd Roll Call was done on 80-pound Mead Moistrite Matte paper by the Town and Country Printers, Plymouth, Ind., using the offset method. Headlines, the photo essay, division pages, and the text are in Melior. Captions and identifications were composed in 8 point Oldstyle italic and the rosters are in 6 point Century.

Photographs were taken, with the exception of Frank Simmons' portraits and organization pictures for Moffet Studio, Chicago, by amateur photographers on campus. The approach was to document the significant events and people as realistically as possible. An attempt was made to minimize the effect of the photographer on the event by shooting candidly using natural light. The pictures were developed by the Roll Call's photographers and in Chicago by professional photo lab specialists, Astra Photo Service, represented by Benjamin Lavith and Harold Smolin.

Copy, Design, and Artwork was submitted and edited by cadets and faculty daughters. Stephen R. Bachmann created the artwork and Ruth A. Benner advised by David H. Gaskill designed the layout. A spring supplement is included to give readers coverage for the entire year.

Contributions were made by the following: Henry J. Wallace, pen supplier; Mrs. Fred Banks, production assistant; David H. Gaskill, advisor; Robert A. Reichley, public relations director and W. Robert Matson, development director. The editors express their appreciation to the production staff of Town and Country Printers and the aforementioned contributors.
